Why Garlic – background information

Garlic (Allium sativum) is a close relative of other members of the Allium genus including onions, chives and leeks. It is believed to be a native of central Asia, but garlic is now cultivated throughout the world mainly for use in cooking. It has a unique flavour and a number of health promoting properties. Folklore attributes garlic with good luck and protection against evil. The smell was said to ward off werewolves, warlocks and - of course – vampires!

Man's association with garlic goes back some 7,000 years and there is much anecdotal and scientifically proven evidence of the plant's beneficial effects in human, animal and plant health. Hippocrates reported its use for controlling parasites and curing respiratory problems and the bactericidal properties were discovered by Lois Pasteur in 1858. Activity against fungal diseases of plants such as mildews has also been demonstrated.

Garlic (and other plants) has for many years been used as a companion crop for cultivated plants to help them withstand attack by pests such as aphids and caterpillars. This use exploits the natural biologically active defence compounds produced by plants.

The principal biologically active compound produced by garlic is allicin which was discovered in 1944. Allicin is a sulphur containing (thiosulphonate) compound with powerful antioxidant and other properties. Undoubtedly allicin synthesis has evolved in garlic as the plants first line of defence against pest attack.
